A Happy New Year to All

Thanks, for Past Favors

This year's Christmas trade has broken all records. In China particularly, we have never been so rushed. This may be accounted for partly from the fact that as we are selling out this department we very materially reduced the price.

The Remainder

We will sell at half price until the whole stock is disposed of. The first to come will have the best choice, and we advise taking immediate advantage of this chance.

Again wishing all the compliments of the season, and hoping to have the privilege of serving you in the future, I am

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor of the Express :—

Sir—The small attendance and little interest taken in town affairs that characterized the meeting in the town hall last Monday evening, seems to arise from one or both of the following causes: by either a smug contentment, management and future prospects of the town, or a blue mould of apathy arising from past experience, present conditions and doubtful prospects for the future, both of which are dangerous ingredients in the life of any town, causing citizens to prefer foreign investments to local expenditure, and lack of interest in home affairs, also a desire to shirk, as far as possible, the common duties of citizenship. Now, Mr. Editor, if this state of things continues with our liabilities soaring dangerously near the ninety thousand dollar mark, Napanee will soon be like the historic strong ass-lying down between heavy burdens—but to prevent this deplorable state of things, it is, surely, our duty to be more careful as to who occupies seats on our Council and School Boards, and then see that they are furnished with all the advice, encouragement and assistance that we are able to supply them with, which (in my humble opinion) can best be done by following the example of several of the most progressive towns in Canada by forming a permanent Property Holders and Rate Payers Association through and by which the town-builders and burden-bearers can be (at all times) in close touch with their Council Boards, for the mutual benefit of both. Thanking you in anticipation.

I am yours faithfully,
NAPANEAN.

SERVIANS TAKE SCUTARI.

City Falls to Allies—Defenders Ignored the Armistice.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The London Times publishes the following despatch from Belgrade:

"It is reported that the Ministry of War has received a telegram stating that Scutari has fallen to a Servian attack."

Scutari, in Albania, has a population of about 30,000 and is situated within a few miles of the Montenegrin frontier. It was the objective of the Montenegrin army, but it successfully resisted all attempts to carry it by assault, until the recent arrival of Servian troops turned the scale against the gallant defenders.

The Turkish commander of Scutari continued the fight in spite of the INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 31.—Tentences varying from seven to one day, and six sentences, were yesterday imposed on the thirty-eight labor union convicted in the dynamite case.

Less than twenty minutes required by the court in the actually imposing sentences, for an hour and a half before Judge Anderson, leaning back in his chair, invited each prisoner and talk with him as to his guilt.

Before Judge Anderson passed sentence, he said he desired to state. He then reviewed history of the dynamite conspiracy as well as the evidence introduced:

"The evidence shows most defendants to be guilty of that crime; this court cannot condemn them for it, nor should it be done by such consideration of the measure of punishment crimes charged."

A remarkable scene in the lives of the wives of the prisoners, their husbands, attended the sentences one by one of the pleas.

Some of the men made mercy; others wept in the their wives. But the court gave the sentences one by one of the pleas.

Frank M. Ryan, president of the Ironworkers' International, was given a sentence of seven years. This was the heaviest of Tveitmoe of San Francisco, on charges of aiding in the destruction of The Los Angeles building, and Eugene A. Cleary of San Francisco, were given six years each. Herbert S. H. received six years.

All the prisoners who received terms are to be taken to worth, Kansas.

Terms of imprisonment imposed as follows:

Frank M. Ryan, president of the Ironworkers' Union, 7 years; Butler, Buffalo, vice-president, 6 years; Herbert S. Hockin, formerly and formerly of Detroit, Olaf A. Tveitmoe, San Francisco, 6 years; Eugene A. Cleary, San Francisco, 6 years; Phillip Ley, New Orleans, 6 years; M. TO INVOLVE POWERS.

Turks Playing a Deep Game To Force Mediation.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—After a fortnight of sparring and feinting Turkey has finally shown her hand in the peace conference. Mediation by the great powers is the Ottoman scheme for emerging from the war with the best face for the nation and for the plenipotentiaries which the situation will permit.

The Turkish delegates proposed this resolution in diplomatic guarded terms at yesterday's session. The meeting was brief and more strained than any which preceded it and the Turkish tactics were characteristic.

The delegation had received fresh instructions from the Porte, Rechad Pasha, but part of the telegram was undecipherable and must be repeated to Constantinople for translation. Then Rechad Pasha came to the point which, in the opinion of their opponents, the Ottomans had been leading up to since the beginning. He declared that he was able to state that most of the questions under discussion should be referred to the powers. The boundary between Bulgaria and Turkey was an exception, that was a matter for direct settlement between the two Governments.

The Turkish delegates then attempted to discuss the questions at issue informally, but the allies insisted that they should put their propositions in writing, which, at a conference, the Turks said they were not prepared to do.

The Turkish design in presenting counter-proposals which left an enormous gulf between them and the allies' proposals was to create a situation in which mediation would appear justifiable—even necessary.

The allies will meet at an early hour Wednesday to decide upon their policy.

DOUBLE INFANTICIDE.

Infants Found In Toronto Church Were Not Twins.

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—That the two babes found dead and wrapped together in a paper parcel in a confession box in St. Patrick's Church, by Fathers Connolly and Maloney, on Wednesday night, Dec. 11, were not twins as it was at first supposed, is the opinion of Dr. Arthur Jukes Johnson, who performed the autopsy on the bodies. Coroner Young held an inquest into the deaths of the babes last night at the morgue, but the evidence of Dr. Johnson came to him as such a surprise, that he immediately postponed the inquest until Jan. 10, in order to allow time for an effort of the police department to clear up the mysterious double murder.

"Murder" is the term used by Dr. Johnson in giving the "report of his postmortem. "This makes three children," said he, "that have been murdered in the city within the last two months in a way which has never before been used in Toronto.

SIX MEN ARE KILLED

Avalanche Crashes Down Mountainside at Fernie, B.C.

Carpenter Shop Is Demolished by a Sudden Snowslide and Five Men Are Instantly Killed; One Dies Later of Injuries, and Six Men Are Seriously Hurt—Broken Wire Warns the Rescuers.

FERNIE, B.C., Dec. 31.—Five men were killed, one so seriously injured that he died shortly after being taken from the ruins, and six others were more or less seriously injured early yesterday morning when a snowslide struck and entirely demolished the carpenter shop of the Coal Creek mines of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., near this city. The avalanche came so quickly that every man in the building was caught, no warning sound having preceded its advent.

The electric light wire supplying light to the offices and other buildings, being in the path of the slide, gave the first warning to those outside the shop, by ceasing to do its duty, and a rush of men from all directions was soon upon the scene and rescue work began immediately. Five lifeless bodies were brought out, and one, that of a young man named Worthington, still showing signs of life, a pulmoper was used for some time vigorously, but without result. This made a total of six fatalities.

Six other men are all severely and some very seriously injured, were also recovered from their snowy coverings and are now either in the hospital at Fernie or in their homes.

The death roll is as follows: James Buckley, Fernie; Alex. Worthington, Coal Creek; D. Rosario, Fernie, D. Rosario, Fernie; D. Naslyczuk, Coal Creek; T. Kitenary, Coal Creek.

The injured: Archie Nicholson, Fernie, back injured; Percy Jones, West Fernie, injured back and pelvis, perhaps internal injuries; Fred Platt, West Fernie, foot fractured and dislocated, wound on face; Sam Cardamoni, Fernie, shoulders fractured and back injured; Tony Secereti, Coal Creek, fractured skull; George Michael, Coal Creek, leg injured; Walter Campbell, Fernie, slightly injured.

Mining Claim Trial In New York Makes Slow Progress.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—The trial of Julian Hawthorne, Josiah Quincy, Dr. William J. Morton and Albert Freeman, accused of fraudulent use of the mails in promoting alleged worthless Canadian mining claims, entered upon its sixth week yesterday with the Government's case still being presented.

John McKinnon of Chicago, once secretary of the Hawthorne corporations, was the chief witness for the Government yesterday. McKinnon was indicted with the four men on trial and later agreed to turn state's evidence. It was brought out in his testimony that he continued to draw a salary from Freeman after being indicted, that he was occupied for a time in preparing the defence, and that it was Freeman who furnished the bail on which the witness is now at liberty.

The Champlain Society.

The Champlain Society, organized in 1905, is the most exclusive cult devoted to book-publishing in Canada. Its aim is to publish "valuable and practically inaccessible material relating to the history of Canada." Its president is that indispensable head to financial and art associations, Sir Edmund Walker. The volumes published by the society are not sold to the public. The actual number sold is 500, which go to subscribers only—men of means as it may be surmised, who can afford the luxury of high-class works on Canadian history. There are two secretaries—Prof. G. M. Wrong and Erie Armour. The latter is a lawyer with considerable musical aptitude, and a strong interest in financial affairs. The former is well known as senior professor of history in Toronto University. The treasurer is A. H. U. Colquhoun, Deputy Minister of Education, for many years a most able journalist, a man of ripe scholarship in a general way, and much interested in the needs of the general public. Vice-presidents are: Sir Louis Jetty, Sir D. D. McMillan, Sir Richard McBride, President Falconer, and C. W. Colby. Councillors: A. G. Doughty, Dominion archivist; Adam Shortt, chairman of Civil Service Commission; James H. Coyne, of the Elgin Historical Society; H. H. Langton, University Librarian, and Walter C. Murray.

Seven volumes have already been published at the rate of one a year.

Although several hundred took part in the riot, the fact that only three prosecutions have been commenced has led to criticism of the police force, some of whom, it is alleged, are conspiring against the chief and refuse to inform on those who participated in the disturbances.

On Christmas eve 105 members of the militia were summoned to the armories in case of an outbreak on the streets, but the soldiers were not called upon, although a riot was several times threatened. Strong representations have been made recently for enforcement of law and order at any cost.

The police commissioners have publicly called for complaints against the force, but so far none has been made necessitating an investigation.

KIDERLIN-WAECHTER DEAD.

German Diplomat Was One of Empire's Shrewdest Ministers.

STUTTGART, Germany, Dec. 31.—Alfred von Kiderlin-Waechter, Secretary of Foreign Affairs of the German Empire, died suddenly at his home here yesterday, after a brief illness.

Alfred von Kiderlin-Waechter had occupied the office of Imperial Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs since June 28, 1910. He was a very poor orator, and his speeches did not create a very good impression, but he was known as one of the most shrewd men in German diplomacy. He was regarded as an expert on affairs of the near east, owing to his having been stationed for a long time in the Balkans, and his disappearance from the German Cabinet at the present time is considered to be a great misfortune.

Murderer May Not Marry Mother of His Child.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Should a murderer who has been sentenced to death, be allowed to marry the woman of whose unborn child he is the father.

This is the social problem which has arisen in the case of John Williams, who was condemned to death a fortnight ago for the murder of a police inspector at Eastbourne. He appealed to the Home Secretary for permission to marry Florence Seymour, his sweetheart who gave evidence in his behalf at the trial. The Home Office denied his plea, and the woman gave birth to a child on Sunday night.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

MRS. DICKOVER.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes MRS. B. F. DICKOVER, of Utica, Ohio, Route 4. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. He gave two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

OUR OTTAWA LETTER

WHICH POLICY—TALK OR ACT?

During the naval speech in the House of Commons the Government supporters undertook to jeer at the proposition laid down by Sir Wilfrid Laurier that, although when Great Britain was at war, Canada was at war, it did not necessarily follow that Canada must participate in every war undertaken by Great Britain, either on sea or land.

In this the Tories showed characteristic instability of policy as well as ignorance of the history of their own party, coupled with their customary assumption that they were the keepers of the loyalty of the Dominion. As a matter of fact, Laurier's policy was in line with that laid down by Sir John Macdonald, although his action was in exact reverse to the Conservative chieftain's refusal to act.

In 1885 during the Sudan war, New South Wales offered the Imperial Government a contingent of troops. This was gratefully accepted, and the Imperial War Office communicated this step to the other colonies, including the Macdonald Conservative government of Canada and intimated that similar aid would be accepted from them by Great Britain. Sir John Macdonald replied by merely offering to sanction recruiting in Canada with the condition that the whole cost must be borne by Great Britain. The British War Office in a carefully phrased reply declined this proposal, at the same time pointing out the immense difference between New South Wales' offer to supply "an organized force fully equipped and ready for immediate service," and Sir John Macdonald's niggardly consent to recruiting in Canada provided the mother country paid the whole shot. That was Canada under the Conservative Government, not under Laurier.

What would the Tory flag flappers have said had Laurier taken the same course that Macdonald pursued? Contrast this with the action of the Liberal Government in 1898 when the South African war was being fought. Sir Wilfrid Laurier did not send to Great Britain a grudging consent that Canadians might be recruited at the expense of the British tax payers. His Government sent contingent after contingent all "organized, trained and thoroughly equipped troops ready for immediate service," who won undying glory for Canada on various hard-fought fields.

future will make any immediate difference to the problems which we have to consider this afternoon."

And a few minutes later Mr. Churchill gave an effectual quietus to the emergency idea in the following words—

"The hon. member for Chester has asked me why we were taking so little for battleships this year (1912). We calculate when we lay down each battleship according to the actual dates at which we think we shall require them. If we thought we should require one of these ships at an earlier month than that which we have fixed in our minds as necessary, there would be no difficulty in laying down the vessel a little earlier. THE TRUE POLICY IS TO WAIT UNTIL THE LAST MINUTE YOU CAN WITH FULL SECURITY in order to get advantage of every advance in design at a time like this when naval science is moving on from week to week. We have taken a larger proportion than is usual of the new programme in the first year of its currency, and we have distributed that money amongst the different vessels of the programme with an eye to securing at the earliest moment those which are most required for the proper development of our fleet's strength."

And this need, he added, was—not Dreadnoughts—but torpedo boat destroyers, of which 51 were to be built within the next 18 months, making a total British fleet of 167 of these craft. Mr. Churchill continued—"Our position at the present time is a thoroughly satisfactory one, and I do not think there is any chance of its becoming unsatisfactory in the future."

Was it after reading these assurances of the head of Great Britain's whole naval resources that her position was and would continue to be thoroughly satisfactory that Mr. Borden discovered the emergency? Or did he discover it in his own cabinet before he left for England?

Real Use of the Bee's Sting.

"The bee's sting is a trowel, not a rapier," said a nature student. "It is an exquisitely delicate little trowel with which the bee finishes off the honey cell, injects a little preservative inside and seals it up. With its trowel-like sting the bee puts the final touches on the dainty and wonderful work. With the sting it pats and shapes the honey cell, as a mason pats and shapes a row of brick. Before sealing up the cell it drops a wee bit of poison into the honey. This is formic acid. Without it honey would spoil. Most of us think the bee's sting, with its poison, is a weapon only.

PRESS COMMENTS.

Calgary Herald—It appears to be well nigh impossible for any Canadian journal to convince the Liberal party of the Dominion of the hopelessness of manning a Canadian navy at present.

Winnipeg Tribune—Canada is awakening to the dangers besetting our country from mergers and combinations promoted and created, as nearly all politicians now admit, by high taxation or tariff policy.

Owen Sound Sun—We submit, then, that local opinion, by outlawing the traffic and showing it to be disreputable, is of great value—how great it is impossible to estimate—as an educator apart altogether from its direct effect as a temperance measure.

Kingston Standard—There is no greater help to a child going through life than a good education, while per contra, there is no greater handicap than the lack of education. The State owes a duty to itself as well as to its wards, the children, to see to it that such a law is put upon all the Provincial statute books.

Sault Star—And so in small places, where needs are great, people are getting together in union, because they see how futile it is to build different temples, not to the Lord, but to the miserable difference in creed which will doubt about as much in the Everlasting Kingdom as the foam counts upon the heaving sea.

Ottawa Citizen—Good government is government by the good. The administration will be as wise as the average wisdom of the citizens whose choice and action decide the kind of administration that will exist. If wisdom keeps its armchair and folly parades to the polls, nothing can be expected but inefficiency.

Victoria Colonist—Sir George Murray is undoubtedly right in saying that Cabinet Ministers in Canada are overburdened with the routine work of their several departments. This arises from the fact that while these Ministers have assumed national responsibilities, they have not yet shaken themselves clear of local trivialities.

Calgary Herald—A criminal has a short life and by no means a merry one. Still the experience of ages brings no warning to the man who is radically dishonest. The adventurous criminal of to-day is no more deterred by the prospect of penal servitude than the highwayman of old was frightened into honesty by the shadow of the gallows.

Belleville Intelligencer—Though fruit during the last season yielded an abundant crop, prices were high, much higher than in former years when fruit was not so plentiful. The reason for this is quite apparent. Middlemen, acting on the principle that every other article had increased in price, raised the price of fruit to the retailer and consumer, to the loss and detriment of the grower.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review—An esteemed Conservative paper threatens that if the Senate throws the naval bill the Government will reform the Senate. It would be almost worth while to have the bill thrown out just to see how the Government would go about reforming the Senate.

expense of the British tax payers. His Government sent contingent after contingent all "organized, trained and thoroughly equipped troops ready for immediate service," who won undying glory for Canada on various hard-fought fields.

Sir John Macdonald stood out for Canada's right to participate or refrain from participation in foreign wars—and declined to participate. Sir Wilfrid Laurier stood out for Canada's right to participate or refrain from participation in the Empire's foreign wars and participated most effectively. It was the oft repeated story. The Tories shouted loyalty, waved the Union Jack and nothing. The Liberals under Laurier wasted no time in hysterical flag waving but acted promptly and patriotically. Canadians like to forget the Conservative episode as much as they love to recall the glory Canada won under Laurier.

PARTICIPATION vs NEUTRALITY.

The point as to Canada's position when the Empire is at war and the Liberal doctrine on that point was ably dealt with by Mr. N. W. Rowell, the Ontario Liberal Leader, in a speech before the Montreal Reform Club, Mr. Rowell said, "It is well for us to get clearly in mind the distinction between neutrality and non-participation. As Sir John Macdonald would undoubtedly have said, and as Sir Wilfrid Laurier had repeatedly said, whenever the Empire is at war, Canada, as part of the Empire, is at war also. In the last 100 years Great Britain has been engaged in, I suppose, over a score of wars, and yet in none of these which have occurred outside of this continent have Canadian troops participated, except in the war in South Africa. No statesmen of Canada have ever proclaimed the doctrine of colonial neutrality, but what Canadian statesman have said, and truly said, is that the Government of Canada must decide the character and extent of the participation which Canada takes in the war. It is Parliament which must vote the supplies. On this important matter, if I read history aright, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir John Macdonald have taken exactly the same position, except that the Government of Sir John exercised the right to decide by refusing to participate the Government of Sir Wilfrid by participating."

MR. CHURCHILL DENIES EMERGENCY.

The more the speeches of Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill and other British ministers in the Imperial Parliament are studied the more futile appears the emergency idea propounded and invented by Mr. Borden and his $35,000,000 solution for it. Every utterance of responsible British ministers shows the absence of any emergency, and their confidence in their own naval programme to keep pace with the hostility of any power in the world for years to come. And the utterances of irresponsible firebrands can hardly be accepted as reliable in face of the carefully studied and prepared statements of ministers.

For instance, on March 20th last—some time before Mr. Borden and his colleagues went over to invent the emergency—Mr. Page-Croft, a British M.P., who is well-known in Canada as one of the ardent Imperial cult, had expressed the view that each Dominion should have its own fleet—that Canada and Australia should have four Dreadnought cruisers apiece and the rest of the Empire in proportion.

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, thought this rather an optimistic view, and added—"These great vessels, of enormous strength and cost, would certainly be very welcome, but I do not expect the great results Mr. Page-Croft has forecasted as being likely to occur in the cell, as a mason pats and shapes the honey cell, with a mason pats and shapes a row of brick. Before sealing up the cell it drops a wee bit of poison into the honey. This is formic acid. Without it honey would spoil. Most of us think the bee's sting, with its poison, is a weapon only. It is a weapon secondarily, but primarily it is a magic trowel, a trowel from whose end, as the honey cells are built up, a wonderful preserving fluid drips.

Destroying Money.

Paper money is nothing but a promise to pay so much coin. If you destroy a five dollar note, for instance, you simply release the government or the bank which issued the note from the payment of the $5 in gold which the note called for. Of course, therefore, you are not punishable in any manner for destroying the note if it is your own. There is no penalty for mutilating gold or silver coin if you keep it in your own possession, but as you have thereby destroyed a considerable part of its value you must not try to pass it at par after the mutilation.

Flame and Wire Gauze.

To Sir Humphry Davy belongs the credit of discovering that the flame of burning gas will not pass through wire gauze having 784 meshes to the square inch. This contention may be tested by bringing a flame in contact with similar gauze, when it will be found that the flame will not go through the meshes. This is owing to the cooling action of the wire, which tends to reduce the temperature of the flame below the ignition point, the unburned gas passing harmlessly through. Of course if the gauze becomes overheated the flame is able to get through.

Almost a Threat.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review — An esteemed Conservative paper threatens that if the Senate throws the naval bill the Government will reform the Senate. It would be almost worth while to have the bill thrown out just to see how the Government would go about reforming the Senate. We know how the Liberals reformed it. Would the Conservatives do any better?

Windsor Record—We are a peaceful and have no particular desire to make it uncomfortable for private corporations, even if they exercise a monopoly, but when they become money mad and think they can ride over us rough-shod and "get away with it" they are mightily mistaken. The people nowadays are too intelligent and to resourceful to stand corporate or private oppression very long.

Toronto Globe—"Is there anything more to be said?" asked the Hon. W. J. Hanna after his autocratic boss had pitched tax reform out of the window. He will discover that there is a great deal more to be said. For example, The Ottawa Citizen, a good Tory paper, says:—"The one certain fact is the necessity of the Conservative party insisting upon such change of leadership or of policy as shall put it in line with the progress of the time." Mr. Hanna may some day find it necessary to do to Czar Whitney what the czar did to the tax reform bills.

The Distome and the Pearl.

In the opinion of many experts pearls are the product of decay. The free pearls found in the common pearl bearing mollusk are little tombs surrounding the bodies of the marine worms known as distomes. In the month of August certain mollusks are found that have numerous small reddish yellow points in the spot where pearls usually form. Then begins the imprisonment of the creature. In the first stages the surface of the distome is sprinkled with tiny grains of carbonate of lime. These granulations grow and take the form of crystals, which end by forming a calcareous deposit around the creature's body.

Europe's Oldest Hospital.

The Hotel Dieu in Paris is believed to be the oldest hospital in Europe. It is said to have been founded in 660. Not only the sick, but also pilgrims and mendicants, regardless of age, sex, condition, creed or nationality were admitted at all hours of the day and night; no regulations controlled their admission or departure. It was the most important of the forty-eight hospitals which existed in Paris in 1786 and in which during that year 35,000 sick and poor were cared for.

The Mikado.

The "mikado" is really an obsolete title. The Japanese never use that appellation themselves, and they do not like others to do so. Educated Japanese speak of their sovereign as "Shinojo-sama, and the ordinary folk term him "Tenshi-sama." "Tano" is the title used in all official documents, and for the foreigner the most correct form is "Kotei" — that is, emperor.

An Inch or So Below.

"It's funny," began the long-winded bore, "but nobody ever seems glad to see me."

"Well, and have you never found out the cause of your unpopularity?"

"No; I can't discover it."

"That's strange, because it's right under your very nose."

THE FRIENDLESS SPIDER.

He's a Pretty Good Insect In Spite of His Looks and His Webs.

Apart from snakes, there is probably no living thing which can look to mankind for friendship with so little hope as the spider, yet when the spider is fairly brought to trial it is rather hard to prove anything against him except his appearance and a few cobwebs.

Apart from furnishing an example of industry and patience from which we might well profit, the spider feeds exclusively upon freshly killed insects, all of them being of the kind denounced by sanitary authorities, the housefly being its favorite quarry.

As the actual destruction of a few hundred houseflies means that several hundred thousand that would otherwise have spent gay lives in transmitting typhoid and other diseases will not come into existence and as almost any spider should be able to account for as many as 300 in the course of a summer, to say nothing of stray mosquitoes and black gnats, we surely owe him something more than a flap with a slipper when we happen to catch him out of his hole.

A spider can bite, of course, but he seldom does except in self defense, and even then the bite is not much worse than would have been received from any one of the several hundred mosquitoes he has probably dined upon or will, if let alone. In the light of present scientific knowledge the story of the spider and the fly that was invited into the pretty parlor does not cause such a surge of sympathy for the fly as it once did.—Harper's Weekly.

How to Cook Carp.

While in Orillia recently Rev. Canon Greene told The Packet a recipe for cooking the carp which were so plentiful in the lakes this season. It was given to him by Mr. Housey, of Housey's Rapids, who now lives at Toronto. Anyone fond of fish can be assured of a most delicious repast if the instructions are followed closely. Take a carp, clean and wash it well, then cover freely with butter. Secure a piece of oak plank large enough to hold the fish, and place them in the oven. Cook well with steady, hot fire for two hours, then take out of the oven, throw the fish away, and eat the plank.—Orillia Packet.

A blue book tabled in the Commons gives a list of unclaimed balances in Canadian banks. It shows that some thousands of depositors throughout Canada have for some reason or other left with the banks a total of $676,147, to which no one has laid claim for years.

The unclaimed balances run from a few cents up to several thousand dollars, upwards of a score being over two thousand dollars and several being in the neighborhood of five thousand dollars.

EARTH'S BETTER DAY IS DRAWING NEAR

Pastor Russell Delivers Address in Louisville, Ky.

Passing of the Year Suggests Closing of Present Age—Dawning of the New Year Should Remind Us of New Epoch Which God Has Promised—Dawning of New Era Is Manifest to All, But Understood By Few.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 29.—Pastor Russell delivered two addresses here to-day. We report one from the text: "He that sat upon the Throne said, Behold, I make all things new."—Revelation 21, 5.

Pastor Russell declared that the passing of the year illustrated the passing of the Ages. Labor with sweat of face had culminated in harvests. Brambles, thorns and thistles had been gathered and burned. These burnings are little Gehenna fires, or fires of destruction, by which all things injurious will be destroyed. In business, the closing year is marked by taking stock, reckoning profit and loss, declaring dividends, advancing faithful servants and discharging the unsatisfactory.

The Pastor likened these matters to the closing of one Age and the opening of another. It is his opinion that we live in the lapping of the Gospel Age and the Millennium. He believes that modern inventions are foregleams of Messiah's Kingdom.

The Day of Reckoning.

God is bringing Christendom to a great day of reckoning. The Gospel of the Kingdom was preached for the purpose of gathering an Elect people to be the Bride of Christ and bear His name. (Acts 15, 14.) Incidentally, a great mass of professors have associated themselves with the saints of God, but have never been begotten of the Holy Spirit. In the end of the Age, a separation must take place, and the effect will be a general time of trouble.

The Harvest of the Jewish Age pictured the closing of this Gospel Age. There "wheat" was separated from "chaff." In the Harvest of this Age, "wheat" will be separated from "tares." The wheat of the Jewish Age, or "Israelites indeed," were gathered to the garner of Divine favor, by the begetting of the Holy Spirit. The wheat of this Gospel Age will be gathered into the Heavenly garner by the First Resurrection. The chaff of the Jewish Age was burned as respects hopes and prospects. Similarly, all tares, or imitation Christians, will be destroyed, in the sense of having their hopes and prospects as the Elect wiped out.

"He That Sitteth On the Throne."

The Pastor said that Messiah will make all things new by ushering in the New Dispensation and enforcing righteousness by Divine Power. For a long time Bible students were confused on this subject. Their thought was that God was reigning over the world; and that, not content with seeing suffering and distress in the pres-the New Dispensation and enforcing righteousness by Divine Power. For a long time Bible students were confused on this subject. Their thought was that God was reigning over the world; and that, not content with seeing suffering and distress in the present life, He had prepared for all, except the Elect, an eternity of torture at the hands of fire-proof demons.

Now, the eyes of our understanding are opening to see God's Love. Now, we see that Satan, "the prince of the world," "the god of this world," is blinding all except God's Elect—blinding them in respect to God's real character and purposes. (2 Corinthians 4, 4.) He has taken advantage of human weakness, and appearing "as an angel of light," has deceived us, sometimes using ministers of Christ and college presidents as his unwitting tools.

Satan has interwoven with our theology what St. Paul styles "doctrines of demons." (I. Timothy 4, 1.) Many serve him ignorantly, "not knowing the Scriptures, nor the Power of God." Jesus declares that He will bind Satan, "that he may deceive the people no more until the thousand years" of the Kingdom be "finished."

"I Make All Things New."

The first thing that Messiah will make new will be the "Heavens"—the Church in glory. The next thing made new will be the "earth"—society reconstructed along the lines of righteousness. Most evidently the Lord does not mean that there will be a new Heavens of Divine abode, or a new physical earth.

St. Peter declares that the present "earth" will be consumed by "fire." (II. Peter 3, 10.) The heat of angry passions, already engendered between the elements of society, will before long break forth in fire, to destroy the present order of things. This strife will extend to the ecclesiastical structure, so that the present "heavens, being on fire," shall pass away. Then the Prince of Glory will establish "the New Heavens and earth"—the new social order based on Justice and Love.

Let us remember, however, that all professing the name of Christ now stand before His judgment seat, to give account of our conduct as professed members of the Church of the First-borns. Some with joy will hear, "Well done, good and faithful servant! Enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." Others will hear the Master's voice saying, Depart from Me. I cannot recognize you. In My name ye prophesied (preached), cast out devils and did marvellous works. But ye were servants of Satan and accomplished iniquitous work, even though ye called it My work.—See Matthew 7, 21-23; Luke 6, 46; 13, 25-28.

 MARKET REPORTS *****

CHICAGO. Dec. 30.—Statements that Russia had resumed the massing of troops on her southeastern frontier gave the wheat market today a brisk upturn. The close was nervous at figures varying from a shade decline to 1-2c net gain. Latest trading left corn 1-16c to 1-4c up, oats ranged from Saturday night's level to 1-2c advance, and provisions irregularly strung out from 5c down to an increased cost of 17 1-2c.

The Liverpool market closed 16d to 3d lower on wheat, and 1d lower on corn.

MAKING THE FARM PAY

Did it ever occur to you that a very large number of farmers are trying to do what no other business men think of doing, that is to run their business without a business paper. This should not be, and is disastrous. Farming is the largest and most important industry in this country, and every farmer should each week have the latest particulars regarding his business. The weekly Sun, Toronto, is the farmer's business paper. It costs little and will repay you many times its price. It can help make the farm pay all it can pay.

An aged inmate of the House of Providence died, on Friday afternoon last, in the person of Mrs. Mary Maxwell, aged eighty-four. The remains were brought to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Manley Conger, Napanee, on Saturday afternoon.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K. C., M. G., Belleville, former Prime Minister of Canada, celebrated the eighty-ninth anniversary of his birth by being at his office desk last Friday. In spite of his recent injuries in Toronto, he is able to be about his duties in connection with his newspaper, the Intelligencer. He spent the evening at St. John's Knights' banquet under Masonic auspices.

Great Britain is closing the year 1912 in a mood of confidence and self-congratulation. Trade has never been better in modern times. A wave of commercial prosperity and phenomenal figures for the year passed all records. Manufacturers of woollens, metal and cotton goods cannot meet the orders coming in from everywhere, the Dominion of Canada being a particularly good buyer this year. Overtime with extra pay is the rule in many workshops and factories.

The Woman In the Alcove

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN,

Author of "The Millionaire Baby," "The Filigree Ball," "The House in the Mist," "The Amethyst Box," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY.

I tried to carry it off bravely and as if I saw nothing in this summons which was unique or alarming. But I succeeded only in dividing a wavering glance between him and the group of men of which he had just formed a part. In the latter were several gentlemen whom I had noted in Mrs. Fairbrother's train early in the evening and a few strangers, two of whom were officials. Mr. Durand was with the former, and his expression did not encourage me.

"The affair is very serious," commented the detective on leaving me. "That's our excuse for any trouble we may be putting you to."

I clutched my uncle's arm.

"Where shall we go?" I asked. "The drawing room is too large. In this hall my eyes are forever travelling in the direction of the alcove. Don't you know some little room? Oh, what, what can he want of me?"

"Nothing serious, nothing important," blustered my good uncle. "Some triviality such as you can answer in a moment. A little room? Yes, I know one, there, under the stairs. Come, I will find the door for you. Why did we ever come to this wretched ball?"

I had no answer for this. Why, indeed!

My uncle, who is a very patient man, guided me to the place he had picked out without adding a word to the ejaculation in which he had just allowed his impatience to expend itself. But once seated within and out of the range of peering eyes and listening ears he allowed a sigh to escape him which expressed the fullness of his agitation.

"My dear," he began and stopped. "I feel"—here he again came to a pause—"that you should know"— "What?" I managed to ask.

"That I do not like Mr. Durand and—those others do not like him."

"Is it because of something you knew about him before tonight?"

He made no answer.

"Or because he was seen, like many other gentlemen, talking with that woman some time before—a long time before—she was attacked for her diamond and murdered?"

"Pardon me, my dear, he was the last one seen talking to her. Some one may yet be found who went in after he came out, but as yet he is considered the last. Mr. Ramsell himself told me so."

"It makes no difference," I exclaimed in all the heat of my long suppressed agitation. "I am willing to stake my life on his integrity and honor. No man could talk to me as he did early this evening with any vile intentions at heart. He was interested, no doubt, like many others, in one who had the name of being a captivating woman.

which a young, trusting girl like yourself would hardly expect from them." "Not Mr. Durand," I maintained stoutly.

"Perhaps not; let us hope not." Then, with a quick change of manner, he bent toward me, with a sidelong look at uncle, and pointing to my gloves, remarked, "You wear gloves. Did you feel the need of two pairs, that you carry another in that pretty bag hanging from your arm?"

I started, looked down, and then slowly drew up into my hand the bag he had mentioned. The white finger of a glove was protruding from the top. Any one could see it; many probably had. What did it mean? I had brought no extra pair with me.

"This is not mine," I began, faltering into silence as I perceived my uncle turn and walk a step or two away.

"The article we are looking for," pursued the inspector, "is a pair of long white gloves, supposed to have been worn by Mrs. Fairbrother when she entered the alcove. Do you mind showing me those, a finger of which I see?"

I dropped the bag into his hand. The room and everything in it was whirling around me. But when I noted what trouble it was to his clumsy fingers to open it my senses returned and, reaching for the bag, I pulled it open and snatched out the gloves. They had been hastily rolled up, and some of the fingers were showing.

"Let me have them," he said.

With quaking heart and shaking fingers I handed over the gloves.

"Mrs. Fairbrother's hand was not a small one," he observed as he slowly unrolled them. "Yours is. We can soon tell!"

But that sentence was never finished. As the gloves fell open in his grasp he connection with this crime. Why have you shut her up here, and pried her with questions, and made her look at me with such an expression, when all you have against me is just what you have against some half dozen others—that I was weak enough, or unfortunate enough, to spend a few minutes with that unhappy woman in the alcove before she died?"

"It might be well if Miss Van Arsdale herself would answer you," was the inspector's quiet retort. "What you have said may constitute all that we have against you, but it is not all we have against her."

I gasped, not so much at this seeming accusation, the motive of which I believed myself to understand, but at the burning blush with which it was received by Mr. Durand.

"What do you mean?" he demanded, with certain odd breaks in his voice. "What can you have against her?"

"A triviality," returned the inspector, with a look in my direction that was, I felt, not to be mistaken.

"I do not call it a triviality," I burst out. "It seems that Mrs. Fairbrother, for all her elaborate toilet, was found without gloves on her arms. As she certainly wore them on entering the alcove, the police have naturally been looking for them. And where do you think they have found them? Not in the alcove with her, not in the possession of the man who undoubtedly carried them away with him, but—"

"I know, I know," Mr. Durand hoarsely put in. "You need not say any more. Oh, my poor Rita! What have I brought upon you by my weakness?"

"Weakness!"

He started. I started. My voice was totally unrecognizable.

"I should give it another name," I added coldly.

For a moment he seemed to lose heart, then he lifted his head again and looked as handsome as when he pleaded for my hand in the little conservatory.

"You have that right," said he. "Besides, weakness at such a time and under such an exigency is little short of wrong. It was unmanly in me to endeavor to secrete these gloves, more than unmanly for me to choose for their hiding place the recesses of an article belonging exclusively to yourself. I acknowledge it, Rita, and shall meet only my just punishment if you deny me in the future both your sympathy and regard. But you must let me assure you and these gentlemen also, one of whom can make it very unpleasant for me, that consideration for you, much more than any miserable anxiety about myself, lay at the bottom of what must strike you all as an act of unpardonable cowardice."

"From the moment I learned of this woman's murder in the alcove, where I had visited her, I realized that every one who had been seen to approach her within a half hour of her death would be subjected to a more or less rigid investigation, and I feared if her gloves were found in my possession some special attention might be directed my way which would cause you unmerited distress. So, yielding to an impulse which I now recognize as a most unwise as well as unworthy one, I took advantage of the bustle about us and of the insensibility into which you had fallen to tuck these miserable gloves into the bag I saw lying on the floor at your side. I do not ask your was all his words expressed, glances flew from the stone gloves and back again to the or's face.

"Yet it is the truth, Mr. Durand one you have now to face. How you do this? By any furtherations, or by what you can discreet silence?"

"I have nothing to explain—there as I have stated."

The inspector regarded him earnestness which made my heart

"I paused in sudden alarm. A look had crossed my uncle's face which assured me that we were no longer alone. Who could have entered so silently? In some trepidation I turned to see. A gentleman was standing in the doorway, who smiled as I met his eye.

"Is this Miss Van Arsdale?" he asked.

Instantly my courage, which had threatened to leave me, returned and I smiled.

"I am," said I. "Are you the inspector?"

"Inspector Dalzell," he explained with a bow, which included my uncle.

Then he closed the door.

"I hope I have not frightened you," he went on, approaching me with a gentlemanly air. "A little matter has come up concerning which I mean to be perfectly frank with you. It may prove to be of trivial importance; if so, you will pardon my disturbing you. Mr. Durand—you know him?"

"I am engaged to him," I declared before poor uncle could raise his hand.

"You are engaged to him. Well, that makes it difficult, and yet, in some respects, easier for me to ask a certain question."

It must have made it more difficult than easy, for he did not proceed to put this question immediately, but went on:

"You know that Mr. Durand visited Mrs. Fairbrother in the alcove a little while before her death?"

"I have been told so."

"He was seen to go in, but I have not yet found any one who saw him come out; consequently we have been unable to fix the exact minute when he did so. What is the matter, Miss Van Arsdale? You want to say something?"

"No, no," I protested, reconsidering my first impulse. Then, as I met his look, "He can probably tell you that himself. I am sure he would not hesitate."

"We shall ask him later," was the inspector's response. "Meanwhile, are you ready to assure me that since that time he has not intrusted you with a little article to keep—No, no, I do not mean the diamond," he broke in, in very evident dismay, as I fell back from him in irrepressible indignation and alarm. "The diamond—well, we shall look for that later: it is another article we are in search of now, one which Mr. Durand might very well have taken in his hand without realizing just what he was doing. As it is important for us to find this article, and as it is one he might very naturally have passed over to you when he found himself in the hall with it in his hand, I have ventured to ask you if this surmise is correct."

"It is not," I retorted fiercely, glad that I could speak from my very heart. "He has given me nothing to keep for him. He would not!"

Why that peculiar look in the inspector's eye? Why did he reach out for a chair and seat me in it before he took up my interrupted sentence and finished it?

"—would not give you anything to hold which had belonged to another woman? Miss Van Arsdale, you do not know men. They do many things

He uttered a sudden, sharp ejaculation. uttered a sudden, sharp ejaculation and I a smothered shriek. An object of superlative brilliancy had rolled out from them—the diamond, the gem which men said was worth a king's ransom and which we all knew had just cost a life!

CHAPTER III.

WITH benumbed senses and a dismayed heart, I stared at the fallen jewel as at some hateful thing menacing both my life and honor.

"I have had nothing to do with it," I vehemently declared. "I did not put the gloves in my bag, nor did I know the diamond was in them. I fainted at the first alarm and—"

"There, there, I know!" interposed the inspector kindly. "I do not doubt you in the least; not when there is a man to doubt. Miss Van Arsdale, you had better let your uncle take you home. I will see that the hall is cleared for you. Tomorrow I may wish to talk to you again, but I will spare you all further importunity tonight."

I shook my head. It would require more courage to leave at that moment than to stay. Meeting the inspector's eye firmly, I quietly declared:

"If Mr. Durand's good name is to suffer in any way, I will not forsake him. I have confidence in his integrity, if you have not. It was not his hand, but one much more guilty, which dropped this jewel into the bag."

"So, so! Do not be too sure of that, little woman. You had better take your lesson at once. It will be easier for you, and more wholesome for him."

Here he picked up the jewel.

"Well, they said it was a wonder!" he exclaimed, in his sudden admiration. "I am not surprised, now that I have seen a great gem, at the famous stories I have read of men risking life and honor for their possession. If only no blood had been shed!"

"Uncle, uncle!" I wailed aloud in my agony.

It was all my lips could utter, but to uncle it was enough. Speaking for the first time, he asked to have a passage made for us, and when the inspector moved forward to comply, he threw his arm about me, and was endeavoring to find fitting words with which to fill up the delay, when a short altercation was heard from the doorway, and Mr. Durand came rushing in, followed immediately by the inspector.

His first look was not at myself, but at the bag, which still hung from my arm. As I noted this action, my whole inner self seemed to collapse, dragging my happiness down with it. But my countenance remained unchanged, too much so, it seems; for when his eye finally rose to my face, he found there what made him recoil and turn with something like fierceness on his companion.

"You have been talking to her," he vehemently protested. "Perhaps you have gone further than that. What has happened here? I think I ought to know. She is so guileless, Inspector Dalzell; so perfectly free from all con-most unwise as well as unworthy one, I took advantage of the bustle about us and of the insensibility into which you had fallen to tuck these miserable gloves into the bag I saw lying on the floor at your side. I do not ask your pardon. My whole future life shall be devoted to winning that. I simply wish to state a fact."

"Very good!" It was the inspector who spoke; I could not have uttered a word to save my life. "Perhaps you will now feel that you owe it to this young lady to add how you came to have these gloves in your possession."

"Mrs. Fairbrother handed them to me."

"Handed them to you?"

"Yes, I hardly know why myself. She asked me to take care of them for her. I know that this must strike you as a very peculiar statement. It was my realization of the unfavorable effect it could not fail to produce upon those who heard it which made me dread any interrogation on the subject. But I assure you it was as I say. She put the gloves into my hand while I was talking to her, saying they incommoded her."

"And you?"

"Well, I held them for a few minutes, then I put them in my pocket, but quite automatically and without thinking very much about it. She was a woman accustomed to have her own way. People seldom questioned it, I judge."

Here the tension about my throat relaxed, and I opened my lips to speak. But the inspector, with a glance of some authority, forestalled me.

"Were the gloves open or rolled up when she offered them to you?"

"They were rolled up."

"Did you see her take them off?"

"Assuredly."

"And roll them up?"

"Certainly."

"After which she passed them over to you?"

"Not immediately. She let them lie in her lap for awhile."

"While you talked?"

Mr. Durand bowed.

"And looked at the diamond?"

Mr. Durand bowed for the second time.

"Had you ever seen so fine a diamond before?"

"No."

"Yet you deal in precious stones?"

"That is my business."

"And are regarded as a judge of them?"

"I have that reputation."

"Mr. Durand, would you know this diamond if you saw it?"

"I certainly should."

"The setting was an uncommon one, I hear."

"Quite an unusual one."

The inspector opened his hand.

"Is this the article?"

"Good God! Where?"

"Don't you know?"

"I do not."

The inspector eyed him gravely.

"Then I have a bit of news for you. It was bidden in the gloves you took from Mrs. Fairbrother. Miss Van Arsdale was present at their unrolling."

Do we live, move, breathe at certain moments? It hardly seems so. I know that I was conscious of but one sense, that of seeing, and of but one faculty, that of judgment. Would he flinch, break down, betray guilt, or simply show astonishment? I chose to believe it was the latter feeling only which informed his slowly whitening and disturbed features. Certainly it

"Shall I show you?"

The inspector bowed, then with a low word of caution turned to my uncle.

"I am going to take this young lady into the hall for a moment at her own request. May I ask you and Mr. Durand to await me here?"

Without pausing for reply, he threw open the door, and presently we were pacing the deserted supper room seeking the place where I had sat. I found it almost by a miracle, everything being in great disorder. Guided by my bouquet, which I had left behind me in my escape from the table, I laid hold of the chair before which it lay and declared quite confidently to the inspector:

"This is where I sat."

Naturally his glance and mine both flew to the opposite wall. A window was before us of an unusual size and make. Unlike any which had ever before come under my observation, it swung on a pivot and, though shut at the present moment, might very easily when opened present its huge pane at an angle capable of catching reflections from some of the many mirrors decorating the reception room situated diagonally across the hall. As all the doorways on this lower floor were of unusual width, an open path was offered, as it were, for these reflections to pass, making it possible for scenes to be imaged here which to the persons involved would seem as safe from any one's scrutiny as if they were taking place in the adjoining house.

As we realized this a look passed between us of more than ordinary significance. Pointing to the window, the inspector turned to a group of waiters watching us from the other side of the room and asked if it had been opened that evening.

The answer came quickly.

"Yes, sir—just before—the—"

"I understand," broke in the inspector, and, leaning over me, he whispered,
"Tell me again exactly what you thought you saw."

But I could add little to my former description.

"Perhaps you can tell me this," he kindly persisted. "Was the picture, when you saw it, on a level with your eye or did you have to lift your head in order to see it?"

"It was high up—in the air, as it were. That seemed its oddest feature."

The inspector's mouth took a satisfied curve.

"Possibly I might identify the door and passage if I saw them," I suggested.

"Certainly, certainly," was his cheerful rejoinder, and, summoning one of his men, he was about to give some order when his impulse changed, and he asked if I could draw.

I assured him, in some surprise, that I was far from being an adept in that direction, but that possibly I might manage a rough sketch, whereupon he pulled a pad and pencil from his pocket and requested me to make some sort of attempt to reproduce on paper my memory of this passage and the door.

My heart was beating violently, and the pencil shook in my hand, but I knew that it would not do for me to show any hesitation in fixing for all eyes what, unaccountably to myself, continued to be perfectly plain to my own. So I endeavored to do as he bade me and succeeded to some extent, for he uttered a slight ejaculation at one leading to the dressing rooms. This door, the one in the rear of the alcove, I mean, is hidden from those entering from the main hall by draperies which have been hung over it for this occasion, but it is quite visible from the back passageway, and there can be no doubt that it was by its means the man whose reflected image you saw both entered and left the alcove.

It is an important fact to establish,
and we feel very much obliged to you for the aid you have given us in this matter."

Then, as I continued to stare at him
in my elation and surprise, he added,
in quick explanation:

"The lights in the alcove and in the several parlors are all hung with shades, as you must perceive, but the one in the hall, beyond the arch, is very bright, which accounts for the distinctness of this double reflection.
Another thing—and it is a very interesting point—it would have been impossible for this reflection to be noticeable from where you sit if the level of the alcove flooring had not been considerably higher than that of the main floor. But for this freak of the architect the continual passing to and fro of people would have prevented the reflection in its passage from surface to surface. Miss Van Arsdale, it would seem that by one of those chances which happen but once or twice in a lifetime every condition was propitious at the moment to make this reflection a possible occurrence—even the location and width of the several doorways and the exact point at which the portier was drawn aside from the entrance to the alcove."

"It is wonderful," I cried, "wonderful!" Then, to his astonishment perhaps, I asked if there was not a small door of communication between the passageway back of the alcove and the large central hall.

"Yes," he replied. "It opens just beyond the fireplace. Three small steps lead to it."

"I thought so," I murmured, but more to myself than to him. In my mind I was thinking how a man, if he so wished, could pass from the very heart of this assemblage into the quiet passegeway, and so on into the alcove, without attracting very much attention from his fellow guests. I forgot that there was another way of approach even less noticeable—that by the small staircase running up beyond the arch directly to the dressing rooms.

"And Mr. Durand?" I stammered as I followed the inspector back to the room where he had left that gentleman. "You will believe his statement now and look for this second intruder with the guilty hanging head and frightened mien?"

"Yes," he replied, stopping me on the threshold of the door and taking my hand kindly in his, "if—don't start, my dear; life is full of trouble for young and old, and youth is the best time to face a sad experience—if he is not himself the man you saw staring in frightened horror at his breast from the moment I recovered from my fainting fit, but I had not thought it a matter of sufficient interest to ask, even of myself, his reason for thus hiding his shirt front. Now I could not. My faculties were too confused, my heart too deeply shaken by the suggestion which the inspector's words conveyed, for me to be conscious of anything but the devouring question as to what I should do if, by my own mistaken zeal, I had succeeded in plunging the man I loved yet deeper into the toils in which he had become enmeshed.

The inspector left me no time for the settlement of this question. Ushering me back into the room where Mr. Durand and my uncle awaited our return in apparently unrelieved silence, he closed the door upon the curious eyes of the various persons still lingering in the hall and abruptly said to Mr. Durand:

"The explanations you have been pleased to give of the manner in which this diamond came into your possession are not too fanciful for credence, if you can satisfy us on another point which has awakened some doubt in the mind of one of my men. Mr. Durand, you appear to have prepared yourself for departure somewhat prematurely. Do you mind removing that handkerchief for a moment? My reason for so peculiar a request will presently appear."

Alas, for my last fond hope! Mr. Durand, with a face as white as the background of snow framed by the uncultained window against which he leaned, lifted his hand as if to comply with the inspector's request, then let it fall again with a grating laugh.

"I see that I am not likely to escape any of the results of my imprudence," he cried, and with a quick jerk bared his shirt front.

A splash of red defiled its otherwise uniform whiteness! That it was the red of heart's blood was proved by the shrinking look he unconsciously cast at it.

CHAPTER IV.

MY love for Anson Durand died at sight of that crimson splash—or I thought it did. In this spot of blood on the breast of him to whom I had given my heart I could read but one word—guilt—heinous guilt, guilt denied and now brought to light in language that could be seen and read by all men. Why should I stay in such a presence? Had not the inspector himself advised me to go?

Yes, but another voice bade me remain. Just as I reached the door Anson Durand found his voice, and I heard, in the full, sweet tones I loved so well:

"Wait! I am not to be judged like this. I will explain!"

But here the inspector interposed.

"Do you think it wise to make any such attempt without the advice of counsel, Mr. Durand?"

The indignation with which Mr. Durand wheeled toward him raised in me a faint hope.

he uttered a slight ejaculation at one of its features and, while duly express-

"Is this your first visit to this house?"
he asked.

"No. I have been here before."

"In the evening or in the afternoon?"

"In the afternoon."

"I am told that the main entrance is not in use tonight."

"No. A side door is provided for occasions like the present. Guests entering there find a special hall and staircase, by which they can reach the upstairs dressing rooms without crossing the main hall. Is that what you mean?"

"Yes, that is what I mean."

I stared at him in wonder. What lay back of such questions as these?

"You came in, as others did, by this side entrance," he now proceeded.
"Did you notice, as you turned to go upstairs, an arch opening into a small passageway at your left?"

"I did not," I began, flushing, for I thought I understood him now. "I was too eager to reach the dressing room to look about me."

"Very well," he replied; "I may want to show you that arch."

The outline of an arch, backing the figure we were endeavoring to identify,
was a marked feature in the sketch
I had shown him.

"Will you take a seat nearby while I make a study of this matter?"

I turned with alacrity to obey. There was something in his air and manner which made me almost buoyant. Had my fanciful interpretation of what I had seen reached him with the conviction it had me? If so, there was hope—hope for the man I loved, who had gone in and out between curtains, and not through any arch such as he had mentioned or I had described.
Providence was working for me. I saw it in the way the men now moved about, swinging the window to and fro, under the instruction of the inspector, manipulating the lights, opening doors and drawing back curtains.
Providence was working for me, and when,
a few minutes later, I was asked to reseat myself in my old place at the supper table and take another look in that slightly deflected glass I knew that my effort had met with its reward and that for the second time I was to receive the impression of a place now indelibly imprinted on my consciousness.

"Is not that it?" asked the inspector, pointing at the glass with a last look at the imperfect sketch I had made him and which he still held in his hand.

"Yes," I eagerly responded. "All but the man. He whose figure I see there is another person entirely; I see no remorse or even fear in his looks."

"Of course not. You are looking at the reflection of one of my men. Miss Van Arsdale, do you recognize the place now under your eye?"

"I do not. You spoke of an arch in the hall, at the left of the carriage entrance, and I see an arch in the window pane before me, but—"

"You are looking straight through the alcove—perhaps you did not know that another door opened at its back—

"The Liver Pills act So Naturally and Easily."

Such a statement, coming from the cashier of a bank, shows what confidence responsible people have in these pills. Mr. A. L. Wilson after trying them wrote:

"I have used Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills and also your Anti-Pain Pills, on myself, with good results. The Liver Pills act so naturally and so easily that I scarcely know that I have taken a pill. TULLE NECKWEAR.

Lace Collars on Outside of Coat a Winter Novelty.

There is no article or accessory of dress more fascinating than the tulle neckwear that is so fashionable just now.

There are innumerable ways in which tulle can be made up into dainty frills, pretty jabots, collars and ruffs for wear with plain or fancy blouses or over your one piece frocks and street suits.

In France all fine nets are known as tulle. Neckwear need not be made of fine, perishable net, but those was made by a busy practitioner who is a clever children's doctor.

Many nurseries, he said, are decorated like this—a snow white cot, white or creamy paper (relieved perhaps by a fairy tale frieze), white ceiling, of course white clothes and, when they go out, a white perambulator with a glaring white hood at which baby lies and stares.

It is sheer cruelty. It is just like placing anybody on the Alps, where they cannot escape from the monotonous dazzling fields of snow.

Apart from the discomfort, white is extremely hurtful to the delicate retina of the eyes and may permanently disarrange the sight.

Toys, cots, baby carriages—everything should be colored—never, by the way, a bright red, which is even more irritating than white.

And nurses should not wear plain white clothes. Slate gray, blue or print dresses should be worn. The constant association of an all white woman must make baby furious.

A Dainty Tea Tray.

A novel and most economical way to make a pretty tea tray was discovered by a girl who is very clever with her wits and her fingers. She first purchased for 40 cents a large oval picture frame from a second hand store, securing a very good bit of natural old woodwork. Then with a bottle of stain, some sandpaper and a little varnish she polished up the wood to look like new, then screwed on two brass handles, one at each end, afterward cutting a piece of pretty cretonne the same size as the glass and pasting it smoothly where the picture would ordinarily go. Covering it with the boards that belong to the frame, tacked securely into place, the entire back then being covered with a piece of felt, when she found herself possessed of a most fetching tea tray, which in the shops would cost from $5 to $8.

Celluloid Sets in Fancy Colors.

Toilet sets of fancy celluloid are so much in vogue that new ones are constantly to be found. One of the newest is of deep purplish blue and translucent. It may be had perfectly plain or ornamented with gilt. It is really very costly when the material of which it is made is considered. For instance, a pair of military brushes sells for $16.50, almost the price of solid silver. All the usual toilet pieces may be had in this set. A similar set, not quite as dear, is to be had in amber color.

When Stuffing Turkey.

After stuffing a turkey or fowl do not sew up the opening. Instead insert wooden toothpicks and with a piece of string or stout thread lace back and forth over the opening. When the bird is roasted slip out the toothpicks and with them the string. The opening will be closed and no unsightly marks left to tell how the trick was done.

Beards and Trousers In France.

In France it is permissible for women to wear male attire provided that they are bearded. This information has been given to an inquirer at the prefecture of police.

A LIVING TOWER.

Captain Meeker's Unique Idea In the Building Line.

What is known as the "living tower," says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, stands on the very summit of a hill more than 200 feet high at Camp Meeker, a summer resort in Sonoma county, Cal. It was Captain Meeker, an old pioneer, who first conceived the idea of building a tower on the very summit of a high hill near his hotel, and while looking around one day for a suitable site he found four young redwood trees standing about twelve feet apart, representing a perfect square. The trees were each about 150 feet high. Fifty feet of each top was lopped off, and the work of building six stories was then commenced. From top to bottom the living tower was a hundred feet high.

Each floor is about 12 by 12 feet and rests on strong timbers, the ends of which are securely attached to the four trees by means of steel cables and bolts. So strongly was every part braced that the whole structure does not move as much as one would naturally suppose, even when rocked by heavy winds. In the building great care was taken by the workmen to cut only the branches growing on the inside of the square, and the trees were not chopped, mutilated or weakened any more than could be avoided.

Leading up from each story are broad stairways, so that one may ascend and descend with ease and perfect safety, while around the edge of each floor are strong railings to prevent accidents. Since this tower was completed the trees have grown and flourished just as well as before. This living tower is claimed to be the only one of its kind in the world.

nets and tules known as waterproof, which simply means a stronger fabric that will withstand a considerable amount of dampness, even a slight wetting, and which when dampened slightly can be pressed into freshness again by means of a warm iron. This material can be bought by the yard. It is not expensive and provides a suitable and altogether delightfully fluffy fabric with which to make all sorts of pretty conceits for feminine adornment. Lace collars worn outside the coat are one of the season's novelties. Such a neckpiece is seen in the illustration.

COLORS FOR BABIES.

Constant Association With White Tone Is Not Good.

Much of the irritability and peevishness of babies and young children may be put down to their constant association with the color white.

Banish white from your nurseries! See that everything about the children is colored either green, blue or yellow—their clothes, cots, toys, nursery wall papers, and even ceilings!

This startling condemnation of white men to wear male attire provided that they are bearded. This information has been given to an inquirer at the prefecture of police.

"But when was the last application of this kind made?" the official who gave the information was asked.

"Not in my lifetime," was the answer. "But the rule holds still. It was one of the regulations of the prefecture. Any woman who can grow a beard has the right to wear the culotte."

It seems that the regulation dates back to the reign of terror.

The Orange Tree.

The orange is the longest lived fruit tree. It begins to bear the third year after budding, and for 100 years it will yield abundant crops. Orange trees have been known to attain the ripe age of 300 years. The orange requires less care and attention than any other fruit tree. Its early growth is rapid. In the first two years it grows more than it will in the next fifty. This refers, of course, to its height and breadth alone—its fruit stems and consequently its crops increase more rapidly after the first ten years.

His Personal Appearance.

Mamma—I'm afraid that young Wilder will not make you a good husband, Clara.

Clara—Why not, mamma?

Mamma—Because it seems to me that he rather neglects his personal appearance.

Clara—Yes, that's true, mamma, and I'm glad you mentioned it. I'll see that he makes his personal appearance here every evening after this instead of only twice a week.

DANCING DERVISHES.

Weird Rites and Ceremonies That Prevail In Turkey.

The religion of the Ottoman empire is typical of its people—barbarous and fantastic. The Dervishes, the regular religious order in Turkey, recognize no authority but that of Allah, and, in consequence, have been persecuted not a little by the jealous Sultans. Although the laymen who profess this faith have but to repeat one or two short prayers and wear the sacred cap for a few minutes every day, those who take the vows of poverty, abstinence from wine, and celibacy, from time to time perform strange rites in their worship of Allah.

The Whirling Dervishes, after a few preliminaries, begin to chant the Koran to weird music played on flutes and tarboukas, which seems to intoxicate them. One by one they close their eyes, stretch their arms horizontally, and begin to twist, slowly at first, but gain speed until they seem, like a sleeping top, to be motionless. All the time they never touch, although there may be a score or more whirling at the same time in the centre of the floor, never leave the spot where they stand, and never get out of time, always moving to the music. This they continue until they fall exhausted, and are covered with a cloak until they have recovered.

The ceremonies performed by the Howling Dervishes, another sect, are quite as strange, and a great deal more barbarous even than those just mentioned, but in neither case are the rites performed secretly; for, unlike other Mohammedans, the Dervishes do not object to the "Christian dog" attending their places of worship, so long as he removes his shoes before he enters the "tekieh," or temple.

Round the walls of the hall used by the Howling Dervishes hang all sorts of cruel-looking implements—sharp darts, nippers, chains, pincers, and other weapons. These the devotees use to mortify their flesh when they have worked themselves up to a state of religious ecstasy and delirium. This they do by nodding their heads backwards and forwards, keeping time to a strange, monotonous chant. Faster and faster they move their heads, higher and higher rises the music, one by one the Dervishes leave their place and begin to leap high in the air, nodding all the time. Kettle-drums are beaten, the chanting becomes louder. The Dervishes form a chain, placing their hands on each other's shoulders, then step one pace backward and one forward with a terrific simultaneous lurch, emitting a long-drawn howl, like the cry of some wounded animal.

The excitement is intense, and the Dervishes, foaming at the mouth, begin to wound themselves with various implements from the walls. They handle red-hot irons, fill their mouths with burning charcoal, drive a spit right through one cheek and out the other side, and leave it there while they continue to nod and howl. They perform a sort of wild dance with a pointed dart in each hand, throwing themselves upon them, until, worn out, they roll over, covered with blood and foam.

Poor Mamma.

The Dear Child—Oh, Mrs. Bloom, when did you get back? Mrs. Bloom—Bless you, dear, I was not away anywhere. What made you think so? The Dear Child—I thought you were. I heard my mamma say that you were at loggerheads with your husband for over a week.

CURED OF THIS HORRIBLE DISEASE

Edmonton Girl saved By "Fruit-a-tives"

EDMONTON, ALTA., Nov. 20th 1911.
"I had been a sufferer from babyhood with that terrible complaint, Constipation."

I have been treated by physicians and have taken every medicine that I heard of, but without the slightest benefit. I concluded that there was no cure for this horrible disease.

Finally, I read of "Fruit-a-tives" and decided to try them, and the effect was marvellous.

The first box gave me great relief, and after I used a few boxes, I found that I was entirely well.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that ever did me any good for Chronic Constipation and I want to say to all who suffer as I did—Try "Fruit-a-tives"—why suffer any longer when there is a perfect cure in this great fruit medicine?

(MISS) E. A. GOODALL.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy in the world made of fruit and the only one that will completely and absolutely cure Constipation.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Paint of Our Forefathers.

A white lead and oil paint, the finish of our forefathers, is easily and economically mixed from the raw materials as it is needed for use. With each 100 pounds of white lead mix five gallons linseed oil, one pint turpentine and one pint drier. An allowance of 50 cents for the labor of mixing gives eight gallons of white paint for about $13.15, or $1.64 a gallon. Two coats of this, or better three, after coating knots and pitchy, sappy places with orange shellac, provide a good finish either outdoors or in.—Country Life in America.

The rumor is being circulated that C. P. R. engineers are looking over the ground with an idea of connecting their two lines which run north of Napanee. It is said they purpose building a short line from Tweed to Roblin. If this be true influence might be brought to bear that would induce them to run this proposed spur into Napanee.

Town Hall

In Grace Methodist Church Monday evening, the week of prayer, Jan. 6th, three live business of Belleville will address the meeting. The laymen of Napanee should all hear these business men. All are invited and welcome. Give them a full house.

The lifeless body of fourteen-year-old John Galbraith, of Camden East, was found floating in a well near his father's home, on Christmas, by relatives, who instituted a search for the boy after he had been missing several hours. After partaking of his Christmas dinner with the rest of the family the lad went out to the barn to finish the chores, and when some time had elapsed and the lad should have been back, the other members started to search for him with the result above mentioned. The supposition is that in drawing a pail of water from the well, the lad slipped on the ice which surrounded the top and fell in. The accident has caused wide-spread grief in the community, where the young lad and his family enjoy the respect of everyone.

Walters—Dawson.

Christ Church, Tamworth, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Christmas Day at the hour of one o'clock when Ellen Kathleen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Dawson, Tamworth, became the bride of Mr. George Thomas Walters, of Napanee. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Rural Dean Jones, Mrs. W. W. Redden, cousin of the bride, at the organ. The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in white satin de chene with veil and orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of white roses and wore a gold necklace with pearl pendant, the gift of the groom. She was attended by her sister, Miss Laura Dawson, who was prettily attired in a gown of blue satin de chene and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Ernest J. Walters, brother of the groom, was best man. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold bracelet, to the groomsman gold cuff links and to the organist a gold brooch. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride after which the happy couple left on the afternoon train for a western trip.

Children's Aid Society Concert.

The concert given by the Quinte Male Quartette in the Opera House, on Friday evening, Dec. 27th, under the auspices of the Children's Aid Society, proved of a very entertaining character. The singing by the quartette was exceptionally fine, while Mr. Turner in his clever impersonations and nature imitations sustained his reputation as a laugh provoker. The vocal solos were well rendered and the recitations by Mr. Dyer much enjoyed. Mrs. B. Black as usual fulfilled her part as a capable and sympathetic accompanist. The Society wishes to thank all who contributed in any way to the success of the entertainment.

Lennox and Addington Historical Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society will be held in Historical Hall, Friday evening, Jan. 24th, at 8 p.m. Dr. Frank H. Severance of the Buffalo Historical Society, Buffalo, N.Y., will deliver a lecture, illustrated by lantern slides, his subject being "The Road to Mandalay." The meeting will be open for the general public, the entrance free and everyone welcome.

Announcement re Short Course.

Just at this season of the year, when in so many municipalities all over Canada, an active campaign for Local Option is being waged, it is most interesting to read the articles which appear in the various Canadian publications both for and against the Reform. To members of the W. C. T. U. it is very gratifying to notice the decided increase in the number of articles favouring Local Option. Article after article sets forth the advantages, both commercial and moral, which have accrued to municipalities where the Local Option by-law is in force. Writer after writer quotes the arguments against this reform and shows their lack of logic. Almost all such writer draw particular attention to the fact, that the majority of persons, who bring forth the hackneyed objection, that there is more intemperance in places which are without license than in those under license, are those interested, directly or indirectly, in the liquor traffic. The inconsistency of the argument from such a source cannot but appeal to the visibility of the reader, how are the arguments urged against prohibition, whether local or total, any less logical, in either sense or source.

NORTHERN CROWN ENJOYED GOOD YEAR

Profits Showed Fair Increase Over Last Year—No Changes in Directorate.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 19. — The annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Northern Crown Bank was held yesterday at the head offices here. There was no change in the directorate. Sir Daniel McMillan was re-elected president and Captain William Robinson vice-president. The balance at credit of the profit and loss account for the eleven months ending November 30, was $76,162 in excess of the amount returned for the twelve months ending December 31, 1911.

Following are the increases for the past eleven months over those of preceding years: Paid-up capital, $170,496; rest $50,000; total assets, $2,821,027. The net profits for the eleven months were $291,094, as compared with $285,694 in 1911. See Financial Statement on page four.
